'U2 a Mystery to Us 2'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13 (AP). —Two Democratic Senators complained today that Congress has been left in the dark on the full story of Francis Gary Powers' ill-starred U2 spy plane flight and his release last weekend from Soviet imprisonment.

Sen. Symington, (Dem.-Mo.) interrupted a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing on another matter to observe that he is a member of key committees and add:

"I am frank to say that except for rumors and reports, I don't know anything about Capt. Powers' venture at all.

SUBSEQUENTLY, he told reporters he will go along with other members of the committee who have suggested that the 32-year-old flier be called for questioning if the committee doesn't get all the information it needs in a scheduled resumption of the U2 inquiry it started in the Spring of 1960.

Sen. Morse (D-Ore.) added he will support a move to call Powers "if we need him to get full information."

He said, however, that the committee should get briefings by State Department and Central Intelligence Agency officials "and then decide whether to seek testimony from Mr. Powers."

"One thing I want to know is why the plane was not destroyed," Symington said.

The Russians claim Powers' plane, reported equipped with devices for destroying it in case of trouble, was recovered almost intact when Powers was downed in Russia.

The whereabouts of Powers, meanwhile, remained a mystery. He presumably was secluded with his family and government agents at a secret hideaway on the Atlantic Coast near Washington.
